The Solo has a great trigger, even compared to my Glocks. I have several Kimbers. I just throw away the factory Kimber mags, get magazines, sear, hammer and disconnect from Wilson and call it a day. Even Kimber bashers have to admit that Kimbers shoot tight groups, as tight as a lot of custom built guns. I will give Kimber one more chance on ...

Ralph's review of the Kimber Solo Carry was exhaustive. (But not exhausting; his usual blend of useful information and borscht belt humor.) It's been four years since our man had his Hans on the Solo. Since then, Kimber's first striker-fired firearm has failed to shrug off its rep as an overly expensive unreliable gun from a company that should stick to [...]
